Now and in the future the physician must be interested in the welfare of society, generally. He has not done his duty when he has prescribed, merely, for his patient, and this is particularly true of his charity patient. When the doctor looks, says Cabot, for the root cause of most of the sickness that he is called upon to help, he finds social conditions, such as vice, ignorance, overcrowding, sweat shops and poverty. If a vice is preying upon the public, he must be an instrument for its removal. If ignorance is harassing his people, he must teach them. If they are overcrowded in dwellings as in workshops, he must labor for laws to prevent such things. Is there poverty? He must help in finding the cause and in...
