The next day was St. Andrew s Day, which is always observed as a general holiday in New South Wales; and accordingly all the shops were closed, and picnics, principally to Manly Beach, near the entrance of the Harbour, were the fashion for the day. A friend drove me to Paramatta, a distance of sixteen miles. Soon after leaving the town, we passed near the University, and then saw at intervals detached villas with orange trees in great numbers about them. Paramatta, or Rosehill, as it used to be called, was very early used as a convict settlement; and there too is a public domain and house, originally for the use of the Governor, but now let to a private individual. The church has two tablets in it to the memory of the Rev. S. Marsden, who was upwards of forty years chaplain in the Colony. One of them is erected by his friends in New South Wales; but the other by people in New Zealand, whither he made seven voyages. On a hill above the church is a large red brick house in which he used to dwell. I believe the Orphan Asylum in Paramatta was the result of his energy, which found vent in many different ways. As) general rule, he officiated in Sydney on the Sunday morning, and then walked over to Paramatta for the evening service. In the vestry of the church is his portrait. His Life, by...
